Spider Woman

An old Native American story about Grandmother Spider goes like this. Once upon a time a mighty hunter went searching for a symbol of hope and survival for his people. He embarks on a quest to find their sacred animal, wondering if Elk or Deer or Buffalo might appear. Instead, he runs into a giant spider web, face first, meeting Grandmother Spider. “Why have you interrupted me, Grandmother? You’re not powerful like Buffalo or swift like Deer. How am I to share you as a symbol of power?” Grandmother Spider answers: “You who run over the plains and forest, looking for a symbol like Deer and Buffalo, animals that roam the meadows in search of sustenance, spending so much energy. How much more powerful am I that I can build a net and let my food (and my answers) come to me? I have no travel, no big expenditure of energy. I simply build my silk net and let sustenance come to me.”

Now is the time to build your net. The answers, the resources, and the solutions will come to you. A W.I.T.C.H. creates an intentional web. She lines it with silken hope, thoughtful preparation and badass skills. Then she invites. She waits and watches. She trusts Grandmother Spider’s example and allows the answers to come to her.
